Drawing on new research material from ten European countries, Asylum Determination in Europe: Ethnographic Perspectives brings together a range of detailed accounts of the legal and bureaucratic processes by which asylum claims are decided. The book includes a legal overview of European asylum determination procedures, followed by sections on the diverse actors involved, the means by which they communicate, and the ways in which they make life and death decisions on a daily basis. It offers a contextually rich account that moves beyond doctrinal law to uncover the gaps and variances between formal policy and legislation, and law as actually practiced. The contributors employ a variety of disciplinary perspectives - sociological, anthropological, geographical and linguistic - but are united in their use of an ethnographic methodological approach. Through this lens, the book captures the confusion, improvisation, inconsistency, complexity and emotional turmoil inherent to the process of claiming asylum in Europe. Do you have personal integrity? Of course you have. But - how do you know? Integrity is personal congruence, so integrity means congruence with a set of personal values. But if you were to be asked what your values are, would you have your answer - or would you have to start thinking about your answer? If the latter, you may be living with an integrity set by others. You are 'being lived'. Any personal integrity you have with values and rules wholly set by others, as valuable as that may be, is integrity by accident. In this book you will learn a method for identifying and defining your personal values so that you can start living with Integrity on Purpose. You will be guided through a process of understanding values and the rules they engender, identifying and defining the values and rules you believe in, and then designing and living a life that is congruent with that discovery. Integrity on Purpose is about self-directed, principled, congruent living. On your terms. "A book about achieving actual results for individuals, teams, and organizations"--P. [4] of cover. case study of a New Zealand school and its community's determination to resist alienating environments. If we look at an untouched child's coloring book, for instance, we think of the pages as blank. But they're not actually blank—each page is uniformly white, with lines established to dictate where color is allowed to go. Children by this are taught about the place of color and the importance of staying within pre-determined boundaries and expectations, reinforcing a system where the white background is considered the norm. To challenge such whitestreaming, this book offers the example of a community that defied and rejected this environment in favor of a culturally-located, bilingual learning model of education based on secure cultural identity, stable positive relationships, and aroha (authentic caring and love). This journey is juxtaposed against pervasive deficit-driven, whitestream explanations of inequity and purported "achievement gaps" of indigenous Maori and Pasifika students. This story chronicles the efforts of the Kia Aroha College community on its quest to step outside education's "White spaces" to create a new space for learning and to reclaim educational sovereignty—where individuals have the absolute right to "be Maori," to be who they are, in school.
